'Iron Curtain' P. V. Residents Assured Road Block to Stay

The year-old fight to raise the "iron-curtain" between Hollywood-Rivera and Palos Verdes flared up again last week when 15 residents of the hill-top city appeared before their city council and requested that the barricades blocking the roads between the two areas be maintained.

The squabble started more than a year ago as construction of the Hollywood-Rivera project got underway. At that time the Palos Verdes City Council ordered five streets vacated and blocked with iron posts and cables to prevent heavy trucks and other traffic from traversing the city's narrow streets.

Protests originating from the Torrance City Council and from residents of the new home section along the Palos Verdes city line fell on deaf ears.

Crux of the whole matter is, that although the barricades exist, residents of the Hollywood-Rivera section have found a place where they can "jump the curb" and simply go around the posts.

One of the group, Henry R. Thomas, who appeared before the Palos Verdes Council last week, assertedly speaking only for himself, told the council:

"Removal of the barricades would create a menace to the welfare of children in 'The Grove' area. I don't want to find a child's broken body lying in the street some day."

The council assured the residents of the exclusive residential area that the road-blocks "are there to stay."

Walteria Fire Station Nears Completion

Painters are waiting for the stucco to dry on the new addition to the Walteria Fire Station before proceeding with the finishing touches, according to Fire Chief John McMaster.

A fire truck already has been transferred to the station, McMaster said. A new 750 gallon-per-minute pumper is due to arrive within two months to replace the 1923 model now in service.

McMaster said that members of the volunteer fire department in the area are planning a "pot-luck" supper in the near future.
